AMUSEMENTS.

"Aida" was sung again last evening at the Academy of Music, and before as large an audience as was present on Friday last on the occasion of its first duction this season by Mr. Mapleson's troupe here was not an unoccupied seat in the house, otwithstanding strong attractions elsewhere in city, and the quality of the audience excellence of the performance were oughly in keeping. The opera has soldom had setting or a stronger cast, and it is doubtful if it has been equalled, in some details, on any stage. It was not perfect from end to end, and in or two respects its weak points were cuously manifest, but looking at it entirety, regarding it as a single effort, dging its merits by the impression it created as a sole, it deserves to be ranked among the best orts of the lyric stage, and was assuredly an emhatic success last evening, thoroughly creditable the management and deserving of hearty recogni-

To write the history of Mr. Mapleson's present it has, plain statements of disagrecable facts, but now that the monotony of repeated failures has been broken in upon by a brilliant success it is as gratifying to chronicle the sult as it has been unpleasant heretofore to point the cause of the operatic failures. "Faust," Linda" and "Aïda" nave proven in the full audith of the statement made repeatedly in these colmns, that the public would support most generly a good opera, strongly cast, and world not supnot minimum efforts at maximum prices; and it is to be hoped that the management at the Academy will copt the verdict cast by the full houses of Friday of Monday, and accomplish in the future the good ork that it is now shown might have been done in and Monday, and accomplish in the future the good work that it is now shown might have been done in the past.

A review of the numbers of the opera, with a view of pointing to the merits and faults in their execution last evening, will show the relative excellence of those engaged in the interpretation of "Aida" and will indicate by a reference to the score, the weakness or strength, vocally, of the artists in this music. The dramatic and scenic effects were so largely a part of the evening's success that reference may be briefly made to them at the same time. Campanini's opening aria, "Celeste Aida," was charmingly sung, with the utmost expression and perfect shading, but many of the notes were lost to the audience by the disturbance created by late comers. Miss Cary's "Quale insolata" was admirably rendered, and both in this and the duo with Mme. Ambre she proved herself to be in excellent voice. The trio which follows was fairly done, but more cannot be said of it, owing to the fact that Mme. Ambre's voice is not powerful enough to sing with marked effect in company with two such artists as Miss Cary and Campanini. The chorus work in the first act was of a high order, and the "Su del Nilo" would have been exceptionally fine if it had been given more as a song of triumph. As it was, it was spritted and well taken, but just fell short of being grandly effective. Mine. Ambre's scena was well conceived, but was vocally weak. As has been said before of her Aida, "she goes about it" properly, but has not the breadth or command of voice for such a rôle. It is a great improvement on her Violetta, but the score is always making demands that she is not quite capable of answering. Dramatically, however, she is excellent in the part. The "Numi pieta" was thin, except in the "amor fatal" passage. The "Passante Ftha" chorus was most perfectly done, and the finale was excellent in every way. The stage setting, the groupings, the harmony of the colors in the costuming of the act, were most artistic and charming.

ond the duo between Miss Cary and Mme.

the costuming of the act, were most artistic and charming.

In act second the due between Miss Cary and Mme. Ambre was a strong feature. In the medium notes the latter was weak, but some of her upper notes range out with brilliancy. The lovely mielodies which fall to Miss Cary were sung with a richness of tone that greatly enhanced their effect, and the dramatic action both of Amneris and Aids was appropriate and at times strong. Mme. Ambre's "Ah pista," which closes the scene, was more noticeable for its delicate treatment of the final phrases than for power, and the whole was feelingly rather than forcibly delivered.

The scene at the entrance gate to the City of Thebes was the scenic and choral triumph of the svening. The scenery was very fine and evidently executed from close drawings from nature. The stage was crowded by a glittering pageant, bright with glistening armor, becauting, highly will be stage was crowded by a glittering pageant, bright with glistening armor, becautiful with most harmonious coloring in the costumes, and pictureaque by reason of most artistic groupings. Calassis's fine setting and vocalism in the 'Suo padre, auch' to pugnai' was grandly effective, and the section and finale never went better. Mine. Ambre under the setting of the stage fell short of only "the spectacular." When this is said it can be truly declared that on the legitimate lyric stage the conclusion of the stage fell short of only "the spectacular." When this is said it can be truly declared that on the legitimate lyric stage the conclusion of the third of last district by variable winds. For the Middle States and New England, falling and low, followed by rapidly rising barometer, winds shifting to high northerly and clower his soul in the southern portions, succeeded at night by warmer, cloudy weather. The conditions of the stage fell short of only "the spectacular." When this is said it can be truly declared that on the legitimate lyric stage the conclusion of the third of last third was a provided the control of t well and intelligently phrased, but the number requires a fine voice to do it justice. Galassi and Mme. Ambre each scored a triumph in the duo, which was grandly acted, and was admirably stug by Mme. Ambre and exceptionally well delivered by Galassi. Galassi's acting was as good as his famous work in "Linda," though in an entirely different direction, and his delivery of the words, "tu sel la schiava" seemed a dramatic inspiration. Campaninis "Odimi Aida" was remarkably fine, and of all his music of the evening the same may be said. Everything that he did was well done, and everything he sang was finished and graceful and charming.

Mme. Ambre's voice was a trifle metallic in the "Fagiam gli ardori," but the duo with Campanini went much better than on a former occasion; her acting was really very good indeed, and she infused a great deal of feeling into the phrases. The allegro of the finale was carried along in fine style, and the trio and finale of the act produced fine results.

Miss Cary's acting and singing in the fourth act was remarkably perfect, and, though she supports the whole of the first part of the act with Campanini, two such artists could not fail to do it justice. The malediction was the only weak point, most of the notes falling within her weakest tones. Campanin's "Morir, si purir" was a melody tender enough to have melted the stones of his prison, and the duo, "O terra addio," was charmingly executed by him and Mme. Ambre. It was absolutely excellent and was deserving of close attention from the house. But those who had disturbed the opening aris by arriving late were now busy putting on wraps and again succeeded in disturbing the composure of those who had come to hear and not to be heard.

Ernand Giebel's version of the well known story of "Brunhild" was given at the Germania last night, with the great Irschick in the title role. What was said of her in these columns when she played Griseldis is in all respects true of her in this great rôle. Such an impression as Grisi in full voice might have made in the con; aned limits of a drawing room was conveyed by the performance last night. The elecution and gesticulation of Irschick have been frequently spoken of in these columns, and all that has been said in favor of both might be repeated that has been said in favor of both might be repeated in her favor, when last night's work is under discussion; but the same sense of restraint noticed in the first criticism of her appearance at this theatre was again manifested. The wild freedom of the character seemed almost a caricature within the circumscribed area afforded by the stage of the Germania. Irschick was, notwithstanding her contracted surroundings, still the great artist, and one could only regret that there was not space for the reception of her wonderful vocal power. As in Grisedis, the star was well supported by the stock company of the house. Herr Meery was cast for a more active part in this performance than fell to his lot in the last, and he acquitted himself well. Herr Reinen and Herr Raberg were particularly meritorious in the characters assigned them, and a word of praise is due to Frl. Heller.

CHARACTER SKETCHES FROM DICKENS

portfolio of excellent lithographic reproductions of six new drawings, of large size, of scenes from Dickens, by Frederick Barnard, one of his most clever, and, to our taste, his best illustrator, has been published by Cassell, Petter, Galpin & Co. These published by Cassell, Petter, Galpin & Co. These inimitable character sketches show Mrs. Gamp installed at a fireside; Aifred Jingle—a true type—in a characteristic pose; Bill Sykes in a pot house, swearing at his dog whom he has just beaten; Little Dorrit leaving her sweetheart on the sill of the window of her Marshaisen garret; a dramatic and powerful representation of Sidney Carton on the scaffold and Mr. Pickwick at lunch under the spreading branches of a tree—a little too much of a conscious humorist to agree with the writer's creation.

KELLOGG'S SEAT.

TESTIMONY BEFORE THE SENATE COMMITTEE NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 19, 1879. In the Senate sub-committee investigation to-day Bernard Williams was recalled and testified that Jim Lewis paid his way to Washington, and while in Washington Governor Kellogs gave him all the money he wanted. Kellogs in structed the witness to offer Murray $5,000 to go to Canada and not testify. In answer to Senator Cameron's question as to who was present when Kellogg told witness to offer Murray $5,000, witness Kellogg told witness to offer Murray $5,000, witness replied, "Nobody; you don't think that when a man does that sort of business he is foolish enough to have anybody present? Jun Lewis and Morris Marks tried to keep me from coming before the committee; Lewis said I would be well paid and they would send me away; Marks sent for me three times last Saturday to come to the Custom House; I didn't go because I was afraid they would kill me; am satisfied that if I had gone I would not now be alive." The cross-examination by Senator Cameron developed the fact that witness had been in the Confederate army, had deserted, was captured and punished.

Norg.—Williams' connection with the Confederate army may account for his failure to collect the pension which he claimed from the federal government. Several witnesses were examined regarding the election and events of 1876, but nothing of importance was elicited.

clection and events of 1876, but nothing of importance was elleited.

Albert W. Flannigan said he saw a man named Harris give money to Defore, a member of the Packard Legislature, who divided it with another member;
heard them talking about the election of United States Senator; wasn't certain about dates. When cross-examined by Senator Cameron the witness said he couldn't say positively what the men were talking about when dividing the money; couldn't remember a word that either of them said.

Norz.—Flannigan made affidavit some months ago relating to the incident above referred to. After correcting the date the paper was placed in evidence.

The committee then adjourned until to-morrow.

OBITUARY. DR. MAXIMILIAN VON HEINE.

Maximilian von Heine, youngest brother and biographer of the celebrated poet Heinrich Heine, died at Berlin on the 6th inst., having on the same day completed his seventy-fourth year. Born at Düsseldorf November 6, 1805, he embraced the medical profession, and in 1828 entered the Russian army, crossing the Balkans with Marshal Diebitach in the Russo-Turkish war of 1828-29. He Diebitsch in the Russo-Turkish war of 1828-29. He afterward became a staff surgeon in the Russian service, retaining that post until about 1863, when he retired with a pension and the honorary rank of State Councillor. Though seeing him but rarely, he was on most intimate terms with his distinguished brother, with whom he maintained a constant correspondence. He was married to an English lady and had several children, but had lived of late years at Berlin, separated from his family. He had literary aspirations and in 1868 published a work entitled "Heinrich Heine and His Family," which, however, revealed but little concerning the poet's career not previously known, Disappointed in the reception of this work Dr. Heine recently burned a great quantity of manuscripts relating to the subject. He had long been expecting death, and wrote his own obituary notice for the Berlin papers, leaving, of course, a blank for the date. His brother, Baron Gustav von Heine, of Vienna, was present at his deathbed. His ramains were buried in the Jerusalem Churchyard, at Berlin.

REV. ETHAN ALLEN.

The Rev. Dr. Ethan Allen died at Newport, Ky., on Tuesday, aged eighty-four years. He was born at Braintree, Mass., and was one of the oldest Episcopal ministers in the United States. He was officially known as the histographer of Maryland and was the author of several theological works.

IN USE 148 YEARS,

Impurity of blood, however generated, whether by the plagues of Egypt or in the slums of New York, is always present in the body when pain is felt; it spreads and ferments wherever a weak spot or low vitality exists. BRANDRETH'S PILLS are the one great and unfalling remedy, because they take hold and expel only what is burtful, so when sick, have pain, dizziness, rheumatism, colds or costiveness, take from three to five, and, if they do not operate in four hours or so, take three or four more. They cleanse the howels and circulation from all impurities of the blood, and often D. V. save life. In fine, BRANDRETH'S PILLS preserve the vigor of youth, and for a long period keep off the debility of age. Sold in every drug and medicine store, with plain printed directions for use. PRINCIPAL OFFICE, BRANDRETH HOUSE, N. NERVOUS DEBILITY, WEAKNESS, AC., NO MAT. ter how caused, positively cured by ALLEN'S BHAIN FOOD, $1; all druggists. Send for circular, New York.
